ACADEMIC REGALIA

Academic dress represents a tradition that has come down from the Middle Ages. The scholars in the early European universities often were also clerics and wore robes similar to those of their monastic orders. The custom has been continued by American universities since colonial times, in a uniform manner only since about 1900.

The standard cap is black. The tassel is also black, except that the doctor’s may be of gold bullion. A few universities provide a velvet cap for the doctor’s outfit. While the usual color for gowns in America is black, certain universities permit the doctor’s gown in the college’s official color. The gowns show marked differences of shape depending on the academic degree. A doctor’s gown has three velvet bars across the sleeves and velvet trimming down the front.

The hood, selected in medieval times to indicate the various degrees by its color, has remained the most distinctive article of academic regalia. The color of its lining is determined by the institution conferring the degree, and the color of its velvet border by the academic discipline of the degree:

- DARK BLUE philosophy
- BROWN fine arts or architecture
- PINK music
- WHITE arts, letters, humanities
- GOLDEN YELLOW science
- COPPER economics
- LIGHT BLUE education
- LEMON library science
- CREAM social science
- SCARLET divinity
- SAGE GREEN physical education

The hoods of some European universities feature only the institutional colors for doctorates in all fields.

THE FACULTY MARSHAL CANE

The cane the faculty marshal carries was originally gifted to the Rev. Dirk J. De Bey by the Second Reformed Church of Grand Rapids, Michigan, which he served from 1896 to 1900. The Rev. De Bey lived with his brother, Dr. Albert DeBey, in Orange City from 1917 to 1919, and before he passed away in 1920, he gifted the cane to his brother. Dr. DeBey served Orange City as a physician from 1890 to 1937. The cane passed to his son, Dr. John G. DeBey (1901 Northwestern Academy graduate), who also served Orange City as a physician until his death in 1944.

THE HISTORY OF Northwestern College

Northwestern is a Christian college in the Reformed tradition, a tradition dating to the 16th-century Protestant Reformation and the work of John Calvin. A migration of Dutch Calvinists in the 19th century brought immigrants wanting religious freedom and a better life to the fertile farmland of northwestern Iowa.

After settling Orange City, named after the Dutch royal house, they began dreaming of a Christian classical academy to prepare students for college and ultimately for ministry. Led by the Rev. Seine Bolks, the first pastor of Orange City's First Reformed Church, and Henry Hospers, a local businessman who donated land for the school, they incorporated the Northwestern Classical Academy on July 19, 1882.

The academy grew from 25 to 70 students within a decade. Zwemer Hall, the first permanent building, was erected in 1894. The curriculum expanded to embrace subjects such as education and business, in addition to classical studies such as Latin. In 1928, the academy added a junior college. The Great Depression hit Northwestern hard, but after World War II, enrollment increased steadily—and with that growth came the construction of a number of buildings in the 1950s.

Northwestern became a four-year teacher-training college, awarding its first bachelor's degrees in 1961, the same year the academy ceased operation. Four years later, the Board of Trustees approved the development of a liberal arts program. As enrollment doubled to more than 760 in the 1960s, three dorms and Ramaker Library were built.

The North Central Association granted the college full accreditation in 1970; the football team won the college's first NAIA national championship in 1973; and Northwestern began offering opportunities to intern in Chicago and study abroad a year later. Northwestern's Christian dimension was strengthened in the 1980s as the institution joined the Council for Christian Colleges & Universities, began offering spring and summer short-term mission opportunities, and emphasized discipleship groups. And despite Iowa's farm crisis, funds were raised to build Christ Chapel and enrollment grew to more than 1,000.

The new century brought continued enrollment growth with the addition of online graduate and adult learning programs. Northwestern's academic reputation also continued to grow. U.S. News & World Report magazine consistently ranks Northwestern among the best Midwestern liberal arts colleges, and two faculty members were named Iowa's Professor of the Year. New facilities included a science center, library/learning commons, theatre building, art building and athletic fieldhouse, and major renovations were made to the college's cafeteria, student center and fitness center.

Adhering to its original mission of providing a Christ-centered education and still strongly connected to the Reformed Church in America, Northwestern is recognized as a high-quality, genuinely Christian college. As in the past, it looks to the future with confidence and faith that God's light will continue to guide.
