Attuned to the Spirit

As a worship arts major at Northwestern, you'll learn to create moving, cohesive, theologically sound church worship. You'll be prepared to bring others into the very presence of God, whether you lead worship as a vocation or as a volunteer.

Expansive expression

The art of worship encompasses everything from the greeters at the door to the graphics on the screen—from testimonies, Scripture and sermons to songs, creeds and sacraments. Our interdisciplinary approach will give you a solid foundation in biblical theology, Christian history, worship theory and artistic expression.

Embrace your gifts

You're unique. And the ways the Holy Spirit may be calling you to serve the church are as distinctive as you are. That's why our worship arts major is flexible enough to be paired with another major, minor or collection of courses that interests you—such as music, art, youth ministry, communications, theatre or theology.

Diverse

Learn to involve multiple senses in the worship experience, as well as appreciate diverse worship styles and methods.

Practical

Worship arts majors complete a semester-long internship in an area or home church, or in our campus chapel program.

Interdisciplinary

By taking classes from departments across campus, you'll discover new ways of worshiping God.
